Workshop Overview

Have you ever confronted a chronic joint issue in a patient and been frustrated by poor clinical results?

Have you treated decreased range of motion and wondered if there could be a visceral cause?

This workshop will help you:

- Get better results for your patients
- Be more specific and efficient in your treatments
- Extend your career by straining your body less in treatment

Come and learn how to listen to the fascial framework and determine what the body's priority is for treatment. Find out how to locate and treat the primary lesion in your patient. This workshop will help you get to the root cause of fascial restriction in the body and help you treat it respectfully, without injury to your patient's body or your own.

Register now, space is limited.

Sheryl Hamilton has been an RMT for 22 years, and has taught massage therapy and related sciences in New York, NY at the Swedish Institute and Vernon, BC at OVCMT for almost 10 years combined. She is also a registered Craniosacral Therapist in the biodynamic tradition, and a spiritual director. Additionally, she has been offering mentorship to RMTs for the past five years to help them access their best potential in their practices. Having taught Musculoskeletal Anatomy and Neuroanatomy, she brings a deep understanding of living anatomy and how best to support optimal function in the body and in life.
